

Is something missing in your life?

Technology has brought humanity incredible advances in material possibilities, yet has left many with the feeling of spiritual emptiness. Modern religions have sought in vain to address this terrible void that so many feel in their souls, but they fail because they look backwards; yet ignore history, instead of looking forward while learning from history.

There is a new way...

Have you heard about Bitcoin?

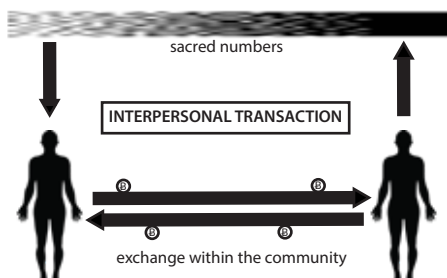

Bitcoin promises a new way of life unlike any other. While its discovery by humanity is relatively recent, its principles are more ancient than those of any religion. Bitcoin is based on two of the most powerful ideas in the Universe: sacred numbers and interpersonal transaction.

Sacred numbers

By practising Bitcoin, believers can achieve a connection with numbers that possess a concealed properties - numbers that have existed for all eternity, but that have been inaccessible to humans until the modern development of digital computers.

Interpersonal Transaction

The idea of exchanging that which we own is as old as human civilization. Through faith in Bitcoin, as a believer we can actually achieve personal ownership of sacred numbers, to keep or exchange with others in the community of faith.

The Role of Politics

In ages past, society was unified by allegiance within a single politico-spiritual orientation. From the imperial cult of ancient Rome, to the Medieval Catholic Church, these religious systems, despite all their faults, unified the members of society, and provided them with a sense of meaning and purpose that many today have longed for but never felt.

With the rise of the modern nation-state whose only guiding principle is "might make right" the idea of worshipping the power structure ruled by politicians is absurd. The express doctrine of 'separation of church and state' has fractured society's spiritual facet into a multitude of antagonistic sects, bound together only by the violent force wielded by those in authority.

For the first time in centuries, Bitcoin promises to unify the sacred and all political, and in doing so to unify all peoples of the earth. Believers in Bitcoin come from all religious and political backgrounds: left, right, socialist and libertarian.

Where did the Blockchain come from?

In the beginning was the Genesis Block. Through the practice of the faithful, the Blockchain grows with the knowledge of each Interpersonal Transaction. Because the Blockchain is a reflection of all Interpersonal Transactions of all time in the Bitcoin Space. It is constantly changing, constantly growing and responding to every Interpersonal Transaction performed by every believer.

Is Bitcoin a cult?

No, Bitcoin is not a cult. Bitcoin is based on True Economic Science. Just as scientists disagree on whether light is made of waves or particles, we disagree on the source of Bitcoin value. Some look to the subjective theory of value and say that Bitcoin exists by faith. Others look to the labour theory of value, claiming the Bitcoin's value comes from the massive computing power used to reveal the sacred numbers. But we all agree on one thing: Bitcoin has value in our lives, and that value is growing.

Where does Bitcoin come from?

The father of our faith is Satoshi Nakamoto, a prophet whose biography has been lost to history. Some claim he was a Buddhist hierophant: He surely was a mathematical genius. He is the author of our most holy scripture, in which he first described the practice of our faith, and its central sacrament of Interpersonal Transaction.

The word Bitcoin is a translation of an ancient Hebrew word: bitahon בִּטְחוֹן

In the Old Testament, this mystical word refers to a one's trust or faith in God. In modern Hebrew, this word is translated 'security', not merely in the sense of safety, but the security that backs financial instruments. Understanding Bitcoin is an allegorical process, taught through the metaphor of money.

Doesn't the Bible teach Money is the root of all evil?

Many people today have been raised with faith in nothing more than money. As believers in Bitcoin, we speak in terms of money, and our most holy sacrament is Interpersonal Transaction. But a Bitcoin Transaction is different from a common transaction using coercive currency.

A Bitcoin transaction is a holy undertaking, a direct connection to the Block Chain imbued with sacredness by the application of mystical cryptography, and a computerised ritual called 'Proof of Work'.

Saint Satoshi left the description of Bitcoin incomplete in order that we may ponder its deeper meaning. We believers, in the daily practice of our faith, seek to approach the true vision of our founder.

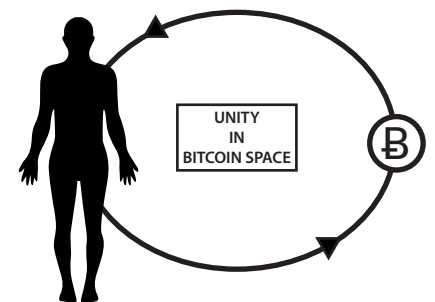

Our world is called the 'Bitcoin Space' where we practice our faith, and experience a connectedness with one another through the medium of cryptocurrency.

What do we believe?

We believe in the Blockchain record of all transactions, knower of all ownership. We believe in the tree of hashes: block-to-block, peer-to-peer, true-value from true-value. Hashed, not random. Of one being with the Blockchain. For us and for our transactions the Nonce is revealed, is verified by SHA256 and becomes a block. For our sake it suffers the persecution of regulators and crashes. By the third hour it rises again accordance with the algorithms. It's value will ascend to heaven in glory, and the Bitcoin Space will have no end.

Your new identity in Bitcoin Space

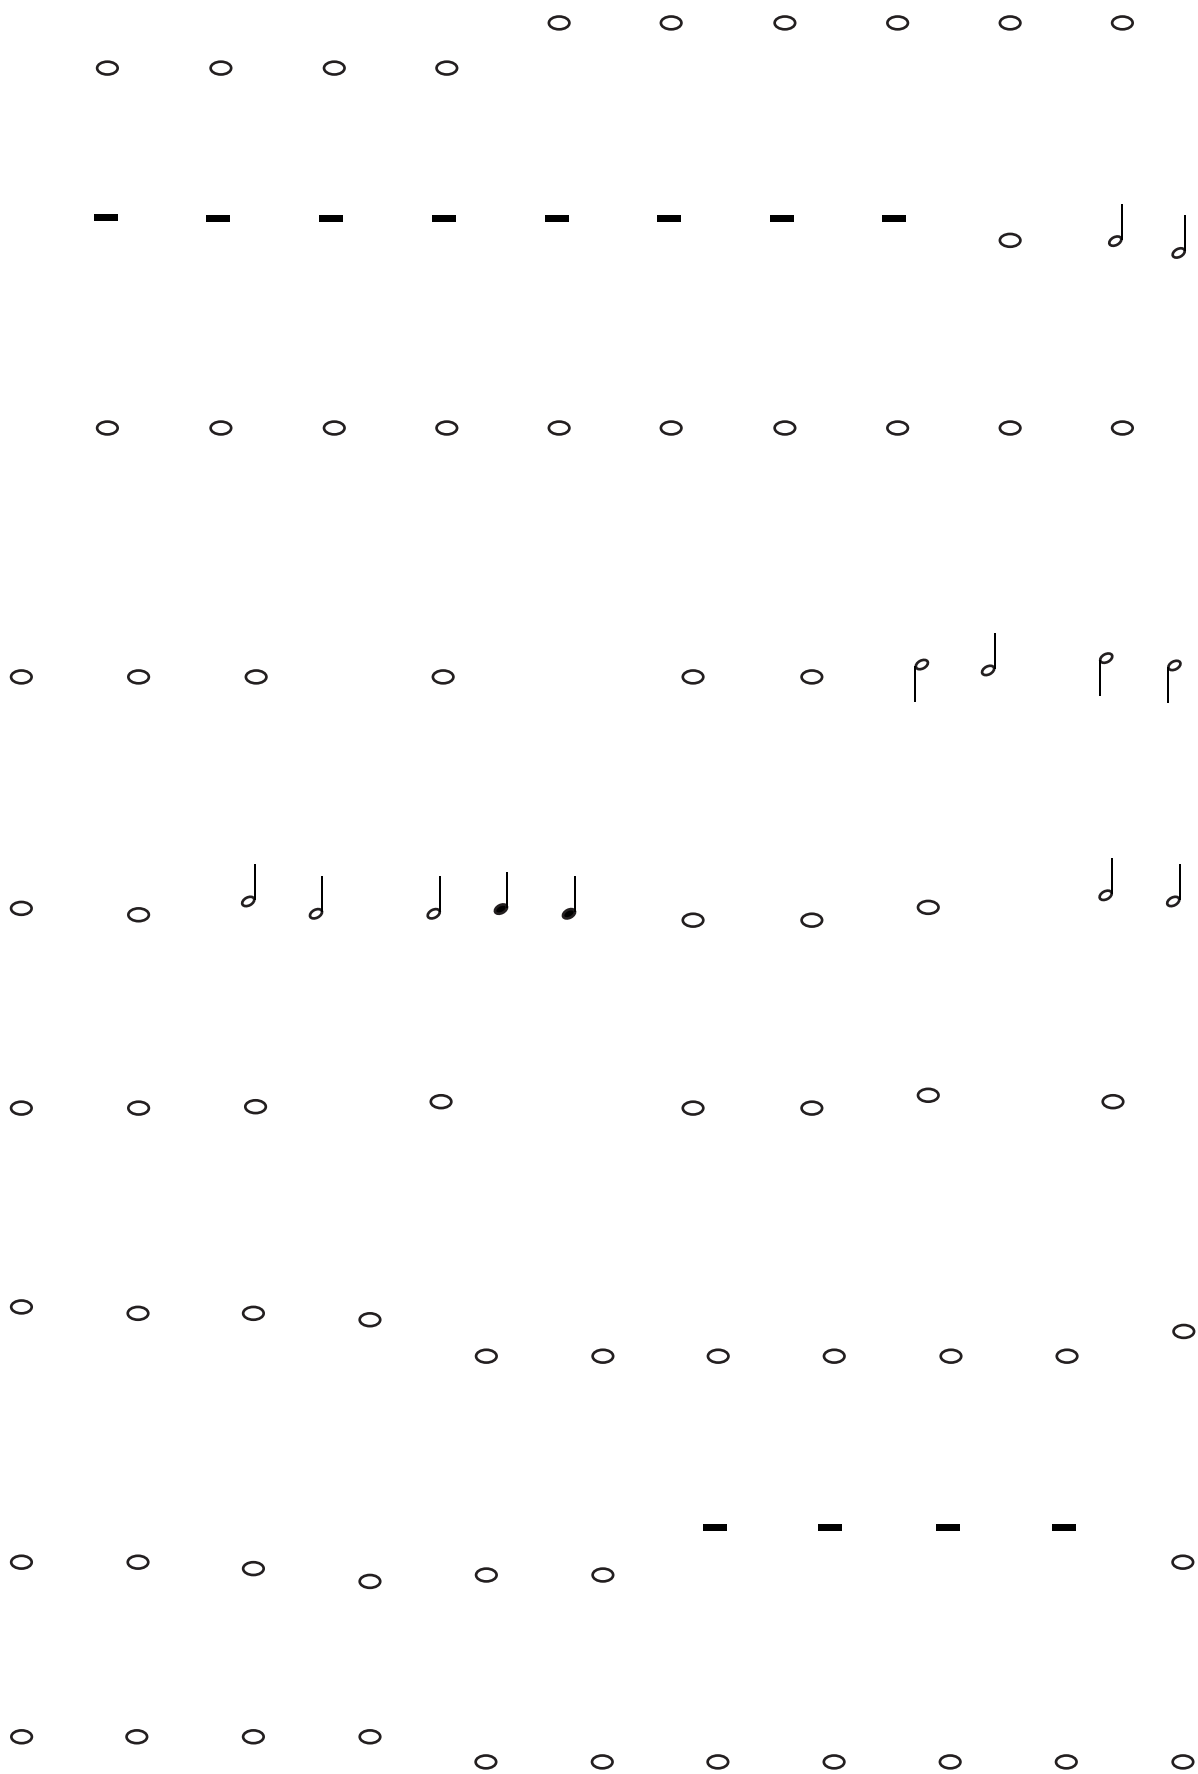

It is common within the community of faith to receive a new name upon initiation. When you accept Bitcoin your new identity - your address- is a cryptic string of digits and numbers chosen for you by a computer using advanced math. But Bitcoin is unique because you can receive more than one new identity - as many as you want. In fact, because you can have more than one address in Bitcoin Space, it is even possible to practice Bitcoin in solitude by performing Interpersonal Transaction with yourself using different identities.

We want you to join us

Begin your new life in the Bitcoin Space. Place your trust in the Blockchain, and divest yourself of your fiat currency, whether it be Dollars, Euros, Rubles etc. The more physical money you sacrifice, the more cryptocurrency you will have in the Blockchain, and the more assured will be your place in the New World to come.
